

PRODUCER

Mousehall and Tidebrook

East Sussex, England. A cool climate and winemakers with a South African background.

The four wines, assembled from the individual product shots.

Mousehall sits between Mayfield and Wadhurst in East Sussex. Gary and Kathy Jordan, owners of Jordan Wine Estate in South Africa, found the property run-down and rebuilt it. Christy Jordan is the winemaker.

The Tidebrook stream runs through the property and gives the wines their name. The estate is called Mousehall, the wines are called Tidebrook.

The wines have firm acidity and a touch of salt, and they are given time: the Chardonnay and the Pinot Noir spend ten months in French oak barrels, and the rosé gets extended lees contact in tank. We import them because they show what still English wine can be when experienced winemakers work in a cool climate.

ABOUT THE WINE

Pinot Gris, “the grey” in French. The name “Medieval Monk” refers to the Cistercian monks who carried the grape across Europe during the Middle Ages. The grape is a pink-grey mutation of Pinot Noir with origins in Burgundy, where the synonym Pinot Beurot points to the colour of the monk's habit (bure). In Sussex it takes to the English climate and gives citrus, apple, freshly picked pear and white peach. A long time on the lees in tank builds a creamy texture, balanced by acidity and fruit.

The Tipping Point Pinot Noir 2024

ABOUT THE WINE

English Pinot Noir is still a fairly new chapter. Tidebrook takes its cues from Burgundy, both in the vinification and the barrel choice: 10 months in 228-litre French oak barrels, the Burgundy format. Light ruby red, typical of cool-climate Pinot Noir. Red berries, cherry, redcurrant and a trace of spice and oak on the nose. Lighter in style, with soft tannins and fresh acidity. Try it lightly chilled.

Six Petals Rosé 2023

ABOUT THE WINE

Six Petals is a still rosé from Pinot Noir and Pinot Meunier, two of the three Champagne grapes. Extended lees contact in tank gives more texture than you tend to expect from a rosé. Pale pink. Wild strawberries, raspberries, rhubarb and a trace of herbs on the nose. Light on the palate, with fresh acidity and a fruit-driven finish. As an aperitif or with light summer food.
